PUBLIC LIBRARY OF THE CITYOF BUSTON For the historical notes relating to the early ancestors of my Grandparents, I am indebted to the late Ralph D. Smith, Esq., of Guilford, Conn., and to Miss M. K. Talcott of this city; to the latter, also, for much kind assistance in the preparation of this work, which is simply a record of the descendants of an honest man.

A. P. LLŌYD.

Hartford, Conn., 1879.

Genealogy.

According to tradition, which is confirmed by careful research, the first Bradleys of the United States were descended from a family in the market town of Bingley, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. The emigrants were six or seven in number. They were all Cromwell men and staunch dissenters. One settled at New Haven, one at Haverhill, Mass., two, Nathan and Stephen, settled at Guilford about 1657 or 8. It is said that the three vounger children came over about twenty years later than the first, shortly after the death of their father, and that their mother, his second wife, came with them. The two who came to Guilford, Nathan and Stephen, were of the younger stock. It was their intention to land at New Haven and join their elder brothers, but being obliged to land at Saybrook and cross the wilderness, they stopped at Guilford on their way, and were so much pleased with the place that they returned there and made it their permanent residence. Their mother subsequently married in Guilford. William Bradley and Daniel Bradley, who were among the first settlers of New Haven, were the elder brothers.

Bingley, above alluded to, is on the River Aire, about twelve miles northeast of Leeds. Bradley, where dwelt Sir John Saville, was about six or seven miles north of Bingley. It is probable, that the ancestors of the above-named emigrating family were from that place and took their surname from it. The word

Bradley is Anglo-Saxon, compounded of brad, broad or wide, and ley or lea, a field or pasture.

Different heraldic bearings were granted to different branches of the family in their native country. Those borne by the ancestors of the American branch were: Argent, chevron sable, the crest, an open helmet, the motto, "Pascuum latum et nullum gratiæ."

The Bradleys who came to New Haven colony appear to have been: The mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Bradley, William Bradley, son by a former marriage of the father; Joshua, Daniel, Ellen who married John Alling, and Nathan and Stephen of Guilford. On the death of Daniel without issue, it was ordered that his property should be divided as follows: one share to his mother, one to his brother Joshua, one to Nathan, one to his sister Ellen, and one to his brother Stephen, and half a share to William, because it is noted that he was "brother only by the father's side." Of Joshua it is stated on the New Haven records in 1652–3 that he was "a youth hardly of years of puberty."

Nathan and Stephen testified at Guilford as appears on the Guilford records in 1658, when Nathan is said to have been twenty and Stephen seventeen. Nathan is spelt Nathaniel in 1658, but probably by mistake.

"Mr. Nathan Bradley was one of the first settlers of Madison. He built his house about two and a half miles eastward of Madison church, and near the Killingworth line. He was but a lad when he came from England. He intended to have landed at New Haven, but was obliged to land at Saybrook and come across the wilderness to New Haven. Mr. Bradley, who was quite a hunter, was the first white person who discovered the source of Hammonasset river, which originates in a pond still called Nathan's pond. Mr. B. lived to an advanced age, and it is said that he killed several hundred deer while he resided in this town. In the winter season, bears, wolves, and other wild animals would resort to the sea-coast in considerable numbers. Mr. B. in his old age went to see a friend who lived about a mile northerly from the present meeting-house in Madison. On his way, he was met by a bear and her cubs. He endeavored to ride round her, but as he moved, the bear moved; when he stopped, she stopped and presented an undaunted front, and seemed determined to oppose his further progress. Mr. B. was obliged to turn back, and being somewhat childish in his old age, shed tears, that he who had killed so many of these creatures should be obliged at last to turn his back upon one of them."

(Hist. Collections of Conn., BARBER.)

It is recorded that Nathan Bradley with Gov. Leete and others, bought the township of East Guilford, now Madison, of Uncas, the Indian Sachem. On that occasion they took dinner on a rock near the place where an old grist-mill now stands, on the bank of the Hammonasset River, about one-third of a mile from where the Shore Line Railroad crosses the river. Nathan B. carved his initials upon the rock, and the place having remained in the family, the rock has been preserved with the initials carefully kept clean and free from moss.

Widow Clizabeth Eradley came from England with her sons, Nathan and Stephen, their brothers having emigrated at an earlier period. She afterwards married John Parmalee of Guilford, who died Nov. 8, 1659. After his death she married John Evarts, also of Guilford, May 27, 1663. He died May 10, 1669.

"William Chittenden, of Guilford, came from East Guildford, in County Sussex, adjoining Rye, on the British Channel, near the border of Kent, or perhaps from Kent, with wife Joan, daughter of Dr. Jacob Sheaffe, of Cranbrook, in Kent, and sister of the wife of the Rev. Henry Whitfield, the first minister of Guilford, with whom they came to Boston in 1638. He soon went to New Haven; was one of the founders of the church at Guilford, June 1, 1639, and trustee of the land purchased from the Indians for the settlement. He had been a soldier in the Netherlands, and reached the rank of major. He was made lieutenant of the force of New Haven Colony, and a magistrate for the rest of his days; representative at twenty-seven sessions between 1643 and 1661, and died Feb. 1, 1661. His children were Thomas, Nathaniel, John, Joanna, Elizabeth, and Mary; all born before the record of the town begins. Hannah, born Nov. 19, 1649, died next year. Joseph died in infancy, and Hannah, twins, born April 14, 1652; and Deborah, Dec. 16, 1653. His widow married,

Bradley.

Saron Bradley and Sarah Chittenden were married at Guilford, Conn., Aug. 19, 1767, and lived there until about the year 1772 or later, when they removed to Hartford.* He was a man remarkable for his uprightness of character as well as a great fund of wit and humor, and much personal beauty. His wife was a woman of energy, noble and dignified in appearance. Those who recall their memory speak of them with extreme veneration and love. They were always warmly interested in the welfare of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Aaron Bradley being one of eight men who were principally concerned in the establishment of the parish of Christ Church, and the erection of the first edifice which was built on the northwest corner of Main and Church streets. Their descendants have for the most part honored their example by continuing in the communion of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Aaron Bradley was about removing to New Haven, intending to reside with his son Joseph, when he was taken ill, and died at Hartford.

Aaron Bradley was born Nov. 7, 1741. Died Sept. 15, 1802. Buried in the Centre burial ground. His wife survived him many years, remaining in Hartford until her death.

^{*} The date is uncertain. On the town records of Hartford is the copy of a deed dated March 31, 1772, of land sold by Stephen Mears to John Bradley of Guilford, for ninety pounds. The lot was situated on the Main street or Country road, opposite the North Meeting House, now the Centre Church. There is a copy of another deed, dated Nov. 6, 1776, of the same property with house, etc., sold by John and Aaron Bradley to William Ellery, for two hundred pounds. So that they probably built their house and resided there on their removal to Hartford.

Sarah Bradley was born May 12, 1750. She died Jan. 21, 1819.* Buried in the North burial ground.

Abraham Eradley, seventh in descent from Elizabeth Bradley, was Deputy P. M. General of the United States. Near the close of his life he wrote a letter to Medad Stone, who kept the stage house and postoffice for many years, on the public square, in Guilford. A copy of the letter is here transcribed.

Washington City, Aug. 15, 1812.

DEAR SIR:

It has often been remarked that, among the foibles incident to old age, is that of an anxiety to revisit one's place of nativity. This foible has frequently engrossed my attention; but on the consideration that I am now become a perfect stranger to every person in Guilford, I determined to content myself with sending a letter, but to whom shall I write? not to any of my former particular acquaintances, for in that case I might write perhaps to one who is not there. For this reason I assumed the honor of writing to you. For once I had a kinsman of your name, the son of Daniel Stone, and grandson of Wm. Stone, who was also my grandfather by my mother's side. If you are the same Medad Stone, you must be pretty well advanced in years, as well as myself. If not, the presumption is that you are his son, and still I may, of course, claim some degree of kindred. I was born at the lower end of Crooked Lane, Dec. 11, 1731. In my various peregrinations have been a resident in six different states of the Union, and have resided in this place little more than a year, and suppose my ramblings have now come to a period. I have been in a state of widowhood near eight years, and have but two sons, who are both settled here. The decays of age I sensibly feel, yet enjoy a good state of health, and still possess the faculties of body and mind in a very tolerable degree. Although not designed, either by nature or education for a poet, I sometimes write in verse, which I consider as a more concise way of communicating my ideas, generally. I hope the present inhabitants of Crooked Lane will not think me too severe upon these of my day, for I have endeavored to be very correct; and cannot but hope it has much improved by this time.

AN ADDRESS TO GUILFORD.

How shall I sing with a becoming grace The high respect due to my native place? To thee, O Guilford, gratitude is due, In thee, at first the vital air I drew; In thee, I first received the visual ray; Therefore, to thee I will due homage pay.

The keen sensations nature has designed To form impressions on the tender mind—
The childish sports, the pure and playful joys Which give a relish to the taste of boys, Leave grateful traits, which to the man adheres, Inseparate through revolving years, And which (tho' busy life may disengage) Again recur in the decline of age.

The Indians there had unknown ages dwelt—Men, who the softer passions seldom felt,
To whom were arts and sciences unknown;
Who knew no common interest nor their own.
Wild flesh, wild fruits their food, but oftener fish,
And clams, and oysters, their more common dish;
Skins of wild animals for raiment served,
They oft with cold and oft with hunger starv'd.

These sons of nature held the right of soil, On which, however, they disdained to toil, Void of invention, iron they had none, Their edge-tools all were made of shell or stone. Menumkatuck was then the Indian name, When to the English they tranferred their claim, On contract fair their right they did assign September sixteen hundred thirty-nine.

Pleased with the site, those now enjoyed the purchase, Cleared up the ground, built fences, houses, churches, Soon did the savage howl and yellings cease, Succeeded by religion, love, and peace, And 'tis among their heirs and their assigns Now happiness reside and virtue shines.

The rapid changes of the human race Every day and moment taking place, Must, while a full half century has run down, Make me a stranger in my native town. For my coëvals now are chiefly gone To distant bournes, perhaps to worlds unknown, Except some few whom fate denied the boon Of a removal into heaven so soon. Meanwile a younger race, a different age, Has risen up to occupy the stage, Yet oft I think of Guilford with delight: And feel full half-way there while this I write.

Though edifices elegant and new Present themselves to the spectator's view, And though the old are levelled with the ground, And scarcely any vestige to be found, And tenements and tenants change their name, The ancient landscape still must be the same.

E'en now my recollection brings to view
The scenes long past and people once I knew;
Their simple manners and their social glee,
Philanthropy to all—good will to me,
Morals humane, pacific, mild, and just
(Though some too much to doubtful faith might trust),
Virtues in which they might indulge more pride
Than those of any spot on earth beside.
And tho' the produce of their grav'ly soil
But ill remunerates the farmer's toil,
Economy and commerce lend their aid,
And they're as blest as under Eden's shade.

CROOKED LANE.*

And still I feel an impulse to maintain The ancient honors of old Crooked Lane, A people whom the arts ne'er taught to stray

* A part of Guilford was known as Crooked Lane. (44)

Among the stars or climb the Milky Way. Here enterprise was ever a recluse, And dormant slept the genius and the Muse. Here proud Ambition never fixed his throne. And maddening politics were little known, The gilded demons, wealth, and power, and fame. To them were but the whistling of a name. No flags have they in distant seas unfurled, Nor sought the subjugation of the world. Content at home as foxes in their holes. Nor pride nor envy fired their souls. But when tobacco smoke perfumed their noses Felt wise as Solomon and meek as Moses. In erudition sought no greater glory Than of some witch to hear and tell the story: The way their fathers trod supinely tread, Without inquiring to what goal it led. Honesty, banished from the proud and great, Set up in Crooked Lane her humble seat, 'Tis thought they stood as good a chance for them Transcription As Mary Magdalene, purged of her seven, When now Thanksgiving takes her yearly circuit, It is a merry farce the way they work it. Molasses they must have, and quick in search on't Each with his jug runs nimbly to the merchant, And if this noblest luxury can be had, Their eyes are lively and their face how glad! If not, they must adjourn, for that same reason, The giving thanks unto another season; For pies and puddings sweet, as well as tarts. The great incentives are to thankful hearts. And they were never brought to such a pass as To celebrate this feast without molasses.

A Sunday's coat held good unnumbered years, However oft meanwhile the fashion veers; May be transferred from father down to son As long as grass shall grow or water run.

'Tis on this spot, this Paradise of earth, (Pardon my arrogance) I boast my birth.

Though this, indeed, it were not need confest,
For so, who reads these lines would sure have guess'd.
Now what I write, I let my readers know,
Relates to facts of seventy years ago.
If any change for better or for worse
Has since occurred, pray what is that to us?
Some rising bard may in a fitting strain
The present state depict of Crooked Lane.

Yr humble Serv't,

ABRAHAM BRADLEY.
